N.Y. Rabbi, Back From Soviet, Suggests Further Protests Here

The head of the largest Jewish Orthodox rabbinic group in the United States asserted that, despite "minor cracks of light," the situation of Soviet Jews remained grave because of continuing suppression of religious and cultural privileges, writes Irving Spiegel in the New York Times. Rabbi Israel Miller, president of the Rabbinical Council of America, who headed a delegation that recently visited the Soviet Union, said all religious groups there were subject to "disabilities but these are more visible" in the Jewish community than among other religious groups.

"We did discern cracks of light," he added, "but this is very minor in terms of the gigantic problem. It's like lighting a match in a dark room. It gives a lot of light only because the room was so black before."

Speaking at a news conference at the Council's headquarters at 84 Fifth Avenue, in New York, Rabbi Miller, cited as a "minor concession" the Soviet Government's recent issuing of a map showing Moscow's churches and synagogues. Another, he said, was the promise to provide 10,000 Jewish prayer books in Moscow, which has three synagogues.

However, the Orthodox leader said he and his group had encountered "an undercurrent of fear" among Soviet Jews about practicing their faith. This fear, he added, is evident in the failure of Jewish parents to give their children religious instruction and failure to observe the circumcision ritual.

Hirshorn Mansion And Fabulous Art Collection Opened To 1,000 Viewers By Son Of Poor Immigrants To Aid Benefit

One thousand fashionably dressed women and a few men who arrived in chauffeur-driven limousines paid $10 each recently to spend the afternoon in Greenwich, Conn., inspecting the art collection in a 24-room English Tudor mansion and in the gardens of the 24-acre estate of Joseph H. Hirshhorn, the son of poor immigrants who was, he says, "brought up in the gutters of Brooklyn."

During the day, Mr. Hirshhorn said that he had decided to give away his collection, one of the largest and most important private assemblage in the world, while he is still alive, reports the New York Times. "I plan to donate it soon but I haven't yet decided where it will go," he said. "This collection doesn't belong to one man. It belongs to the people."

Not long ago Mr. Hirshhorn and his wife had lunch at the White House with President and Mrs. Johnson, who asked that Mr. Hirshhorn consider housing the collection in a separate building in Washington. Governor Rockefeller has visited him, suggesting that the collection be housed in New York State.

However, the collection is still at the collector's home at Greenwich, Conn., and this was to the advantage of the Westchester chapter of the National Cystic Fibrosis Research Foundation, which sponsored a benefit showing of the art works.

From 1 to 5 P.M., Round Hill Road was like Broadway on a matinee day. The visitors saw everything from A (Armitage, Arp, and Archipenko) to Z (Zadkine, Zogbaum, and Zorach). The collection is rarely opened to the public. Mr. Hirshhorn consented to the benefit when asked by a friend who works for the foundation.

The art is everywhere. Mantelpieces and tables are filled with sculpture. Guests' rooms, sitting rooms, and hallways have paintings by Marin, Bacon, Shahn, Hopper, Sloan, Wyeth and de Kooning. In the gardens are Daumiers, Giacomettis, and Marinis. And on the walls of the eleven bathrooms are water-colors by Max Ernst and oils by Jack Butler Yeats, a brother of the poet, William Butler Yeats. There are also Oriental rugs and Early American and English antiques.

"This runs the gamut of all emotions," said Mrs. Harry Juster, of Mamaroneck, N. Y. "It leaves you spent."

"Isn't it incredible?" said Roberta Peters, the opera star. Other adjectives overheard in the gardens included phenomenal, stunning, and fabulous. A few visitors had some reservations, says the New York Times. "I couldn't live with it," said one woman. "It's vast. There's too much art in this house."

Besides the mansion, Mr. Hirshhorn's collection — it totals 5,000 paintings and 1,500 pieces of sculpture — also hangs in his apartment and office in Manhattan; in a Toronto office; in his villa on the Riviera; and in warehouses. Its value has never been made public but it is said to be worth many millions of dollars.

The sculpture is international and covers many epochs, including pieces of Etruscan and Hittite origin, but the bulk dates from the middle of the last century. These range from a two-inch-long bronze figurine bought for $1 in the Nice flea market to a seven-foot-high, nine-foot-long, "The Burgers of Calais," by Rodin, for which Mr. Hirshhorn paid $250,000. While the paintings are primarily 20th-century American of all schools there are also works from the late 19th century.

Some visitors were as interested in Mr. Hirshhorn as in his collection. He is a small (five feet, four), ebullient, gray-haired man, 66 years of age. "They ask all sorts of personal questions," he said. "How much money I have" (reputed to be worth $130 million, he insists that the figure really is a great deal less); "How I made my money" (in Canadian uranium). He sold his uranium interests several years ago but still has substantial investments in other mining ventures. Among other things, he is chairman of the board of the Callahan Mining Company, of 277 Park Avenue, in New York).

Early in the afternoon, Mr. Hirshhorn, wearing a gray suit, white shirt, red tie, and slippers, guided some visitors through the mansion. "Here — this is a Japanese Buddha dated 1200 A.D. I bought this on a trip to California," writes the New York Times. Smiling, he continued, "That will cost you $2 for the lecture, girls."

Seconds later, he said: "This is the dining room. When I can afford it I eat in here. Here's a Picasso. This is by Eakins and this is one by Gauguin." He walked into a hallway and said, "Here's one by Kline. That's Matisse. Over there is Epstein and Maillol and Lipchitz. Everybody lookee, no touchee. This is Walt Kuhn. That's a fellow by the name of Paul Jenkins. There's a Brancusi sculpture. There's a Rodin of Balzac."

Excusing himself, he sat down for lunch of cantaloupe, cottage cheese and coffee with his wife, Olga, in his bedroom and talked about his life and art.

"I'm one of thirteen children," he said. "I was born in Latvia. We came here when I was still a youngster. My father died when I was a year old. At Christmas we'd get wonderful calendars from the Prudential Life Insurance Company. I cut a Landseer and a Bougereau reproduction out of the calendar and hung it on the wall. When I grew up I bought two Landseers and a Bougereau. I started to buy etchings when I was seventeen."

U.S. Referee Said Most Bankrupts Are Honest But Dumb, Can't Say No

Irwin Kurtz, a Federal referee in bankruptcy in New York for 26 years, died at the Kingsbridge House of the Jewish Home and Hospital for the Aged in the Bronx following a long illness. He was 81 years old.

Mr. Kurtz, who formerly lived in Peter Cooper Village, had resided at the home for six years after a heart attack. He was named to the referee post in 1932 as an appointee of the late Judge Frank Coleman, says the New York Times. He retired from the position, which is under the jurisdiction of the United States District Court, in 1958.

During and after the Depression Mr. Kurtz presided over the shattered fortunes of hundreds of individuals and corporations.

"Most bankrupts are honest but dumb," he once wrote in a magazine article. "They're people who just can't say no to a tempting purchase or a highly speculative investment. A few belatedly face the music and file voluntarily in bankruptcy," he continued, "but a majority are thrown into it by irate creditors."

As a referee, it was Mr. Kurtz's task to appoint trustees to watch over the assets of anyone filing for bankruptcy, hear the testimony of witnesses, approve the trustee's plan for distribution of the assets, and close the case by discharging the debtor from bankruptcy.

Among the cases handled by Mr. Kurtz was that of Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, who defrauded his friends and relatives of more than $6 million in 1938.

Whitney, before pleading guilty to grand larceny, filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition. Mr. Kurtz auctioned off Whitney's New Jersey farm and blue-ribbon livestock to satisfy creditors.

Other cases included the United Cigar Stores in 1933, a complex proceeding that took Mr. Kurtz seven years to solve; and the Consolidation Automatic Machine Company, known as Camco, in which hundreds of stockholders lost everything, in 1936.

The Camco case involved the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who was a director and founder of the holding company. Mr. Roosevelt resigned when he became Governor of New York, well before the bankruptcy proceeding. Many stockholders, however, said they had been moved to buy the stock by the Roosevelt name.

Mr. Kurtz also took part in the proceedings that followed the crash of the Samuel Insull empire. He wound up the affairs of one Insull company by paying the creditors a total dividend of one-4629th of 1 per cent.

Before becoming a bankruptcy referee, Mr. Kurtz was a practicing lawyer. He was once counsel for the Harlem Board of Commerce, reports the New York Times.

COUNCIL OF [illegible]H FEDERATIONS AND WELFARE FUNDS HOLDS ASSEMBLY IN MONTREAL

Several prominent educators and community leaders said that the American Jewish community was seriously threatened by a loss of religious and cultural identity and a breakdown of moral values unless Jewish education was expanded and intensified, reports Irving Spiegel in the New York Times. The problem occupied the attention of more than 1,000 delegates, representing various sections of the United States at the 34th general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal.

Graenum Berger, consultant to the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York, cited the comparatively low rate of divorce, suicide, alcoholism, narcotics addiction and juvenile delinquency among Jews. He attributed this to "Jewish religious tradition and the influences of the family unit and high educational and moral aspirations."

However, Mr. Berger asserted, "these influences no longer dominate the Jewish scene to the extent that they did a generation ago."

He noted that with the lessening of fidelity to Jewish tradition and values there was a corresponding increase in the incidence of social ills among Jews.

Isaac Toubin, executive director of the American Association of Jewish Education, said a "great and most dangerous gap" in Jewish education "exists on the adolescent and college-age levels."

Mr. Toubin noted that more than 600,000 youngsters attended afternoon and all-day Jewish schools but that less than eight per cent of them continued their education on the secondary level.

"The disaffection of college youth, widely confirmed in many studies, is the direct consequence of this hiatus in learning," he said.

As a result, Mr. Toubin declared, on the college level "we are confronted by the abandonment of Jewish identity by the most important element in Jewish life, the Jewish intellectual."

Mr. Toubin urged the establishment of a network of Jewish secondary schools adequately financed, expertly staffed "and with an imaginative and relevant curriculum."

Dr. Judah Shapiro, national secretary of the National Foundation for Jewish Culture, also asserted that "the most neglected area of Jewish education" existed on the American campus, says the New York Times. "The large majority of the future Jewish community is passing through our colleges and universities with only limited opportunities to acquire an understanding of Jewish life," he declared.

Financial assistance from American Jews, Dr. Shapiro said, could result in the establishment of chairs of Jewish studies, scholars-in-residence, and the expansion of university libraries in Jewish materials.

Louis Stern, president of the Council, and others who participated in workshops, generally agreed that Jewish religious education must deal not only with the Bible and history but also must "apply Judaism's ethical and moral principles specifically to the problems of human relationships, social and economic justice, and civil rights."

Leaders of national and local Jewish groups throughout the United States reported on an intensified involvement of their agencies in the war on poverty "without regard for race, color or creed," at the assembly.

A report, as well as interviews with Jewish leaders, representing groups in various sections of the United States, disclosed a wide range of activities in twenty-six cities by Jewish voluntary agencies supporting the Government's campaign to erase poverty.

The Council is the coordinating body of 220 Jewish central and community federations that annually raise more than two hundred million dollars to finance humanitarian and self-help services in the United States, Canada and overseas, with particular emphasis on Israel.

Philip Bernstein, executive director of the Council, reported that these Federations were working with other groups of different faiths "to make sure that community action programs truly represent the total community rather than segmented groups with special axes to grind."

He added that the growing involvement of Jewish agencies in the anti-poverty war was intended to guarantee that the programs "concentrate completely on priority needs and effective action," says the New York Times, so that they should not be sidetracked by politics or wasted on inconsequentials."

Increasing participation of the Jewish groups was noted in the anti-poverty war, particularly in programs to help the American Negro achieve full equality.

For instance, Bernard A. Edelstein, executive director of the Jewish Federation in St. Louis, Missouri, said that in his city the Jewish Employment and Vocational Service had received a $410,000 grant from the Office of Manpower, Automation and Training to work with under-privileged teen-agers from "all races, colors, and creeds."

Many of the Jewish groups have received Federal grants because of their special experience, knowledge, and professional skills in coping with social problems.

Talks with delegates disclosed that their concern for eradicating poverty stemmed from the "most basic Jewish religious purpose." One delegate quoted the Biblical injunction, "There shall be no poor among you."

Philip Bernstein, executive director of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds, cited the Hebrew word, "Tzedakah," commonly used for "charity," but which Mr. Bernstein said "literally means social justice."

"The war on poverty," he said, "the eradication of dependency, is regarded not just as personal benevolence by Judaism, but as the requirement of an enlightened and just society."

The changing attitude toward Judaism on the part of the Christian community in the U.S., was noted by a famous Biblical scholar, writes David Tafler, in the Montreal Gazette. "This attitude has undergone a radical change," Dr. Abraham J. Heschel, professor at the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York, told the 34th general assembly of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds in the Queen Elizabeth Hotel Saturday.

Dr. Heschel presented the annual Herbert R. Abeles Memorial address at a banquet given delegates by Samuel Bronfman.

"Instead of hostility to Judaism, there is a respect and an expectation," Dr. Heschel said. "There is belief that we Jews have a message to offer, that we have some significant insights which other people ought to share."

★ UNITED ZIONIST ★ COUNCIL

Of Canada conveyed a communication to Ottawa commending the stand taken by the Canadian delegation at the U.N. with respect to the Greek-Hungarian resolution on racial discrimination in face of the fact that the Committee of the United Nations General Assembly dealing in social, humanitarian, and cultural matters recently rejected the American-Brazilian move to include condemnation of anti-Semitism in the draft of the United Nations pact on elimination of racial discrimination. Canada, with the United States and Israel, was among the twelve nations that voted against the Greek-Hungarian resolution which shut off debate on the anti-Semitism issue. Also among those who took a sharp stand against anti-Semitism were The Netherlands, Great Britain, Bolivia, and Finland. A letter to The Honourable Paul Martin, M.P., Secretary of State for External Affairs, signed by Lawrence Freiman, president of the United Zionist Council and the Zionist Organization of Canada, said: "It is patently clear that the Canadian delegation considered the Greek-Hungarian resolution a flagrant attempt to prevent the United Nations from dealing with the central issue, which was the condemnation of anti-Semitism as contained in the United States-Brazil resolution". Also that the attempt of the Soviet Union to introduce an amendment seeking to bracket Zionism with racism was an act of "appalling cynicism clearly born of the desire to divert attention from the anti-Jewish discrimination practiced by the Soviet Government and as a protective cover against protests in Canada and throughout the world against such discrimination; an issue on which they are apparently exceedingly sensitive."

★At a dinner given by the American Jewish Congress in New York, honouring Samuel Bronfman, 15 Belvedere Road, as a recipient of the Stephen Wise Award of the American Jewish Congress, along with Ambassador Arthur Goldberg, and Monroe Goldwater, were: Mrs. Samuel Bronfman, O.B.E.; Mr. and Mrs. Abe Bronfman; Michael Garber, Q.C., president of the Canadian Jewish Congress; Saul Hayes, executive vice-president; Mr. and Mrs. Lavy M. Becker, Mr. and Mrs. Julius J. Block; Gordon Brown; Jacob M. Lowy.

Arrival Of First Jews To Settle In The U. S., In 1654, Is Commemorated

Landing Day Commemorative Exercises were held recently at the East Coast Memorial in Battery Park, New York, by the American Jewish Historical Society to commemorate the arrival in New Amsterdam of twenty-three Jewish refugees early in September 1654, who established the first permanent Jewish settlement in America. Dr. C. V. Stutterheim, Acting Consul General of the Netherlands in New York City, extended greetings on behalf of the Royal Netherlands Government, as did Albert A. List, chairman of the Citizens Sponsoring Committee.

Dr. Miriam K. Freund, historian, educator, and former national president of the Women's Zionist Organization of America, then spoke on "Each Man's Country: A Nation of Immigrants." She asserted that Congressional approval of the bill eliminating "the discriminatory national origins quota system will be a triumph for our faith in the American ideal that neither race nor creed nor social position shall bar men from achieving their full potential."

Dr. Freund discussed the contributions of Jews and other immigrants to the development of the United States. She termed the United States "a society of immigrants," where "men and women . . . were, and are being given the opportunity to begin life anew." Dr. Freund said that since 1607, more than forty-two million people migrated to the United States, "the largest migration of people in all recorded history, so that today every American is either an immigrant or a descendant of an immigrant, with the exception, perhaps, of the Indian."

"This massive emigration has shaped the American of today," Dr. Freund declared. "It supplied a continuous flow of creative abilities and ideas, and it made possible the 'great society' of our time; it evoked leadership for democracy in the world. Everywhere in our national life today can be found the mark and the contribution of the immigrant."

Dr. Freund said that the development of the American Jewish Community in the past 311 years, since its establishment in 1654, constitutes "a new chapter in world Jewish history." She stated: "Jewish immigration to America differed from all other Jewish migration; as the Jew moved to this hemisphere, he moved from a circumscribed unhappy existence to freedom: Jewish history has no other example of a Jewish community which became so organically part of the fabric of the country which received it."

Dr. Freund said: "Each thrust of Jewish immigration brought its own problems; its own challenges. The processes by which these challenges were met positively led to the end product: a creative, vital American Jewish community, and at the same time made a magnificent contribution to American civilization. The United States has been for the Jews the land of immigration and not of migration as a result; this alone would mark American Jewish history as unique in world Jewish history."

Dr. Philip D. Sang of River Forest, Illinois, chairman of the Executive Council of the American Jewish Historical Society, called upon Mrs. Rudolph Baer, a descendant of the Reverend Gershom Mendes Seixas, patriot minister of Congregation Shearith Israel of New York; and Dina Choucka, a new American child, a recent immigrant from Egypt, at present a student at the Seth Low Junior High School in Brooklyn, whose immigration was assisted by the United HIAS Service and by the New York Association for New Americans, to place a wreath at the base of the flagpole in the Peter Minuit Plaza in honor of the twenty-three early Jewish pioneers who established the first Jewish community in the U.S.

A luncheon was presided over by Dr. Abram Kanof, chairman of the Landing Day Committee. An address was delivered by Dr. James J. Heslin, director of the New-York Historical Society (the oldest historical society in New York State and the second oldest one in the United States of America), and the commemorative oration was given by Senator Jacob K. Javits.

The theme of Dr. Heslin's address was "The Lessons of History." He stated: "When the American Jewish Historical Society was organized in New York City on June 7, 1892, the stated object of the Society, as embodied in its constitution was: 'The collection, preservation, and publication of material having reference to the settlement and history of the Jews on the American continent.' The first publication of the new organization appeared in 1893, a year after the Society was founded, and the high standard of scholarship achieved by that initial venture into print has been characteristic ever since."

He further stated: "A serious situation which affected the study and writing of American history as the eighteenth century ended was the scarcity of libraries, or other institutions, which could house and preserve the documents and records from which scholarly histories could be written. It was the historical societies, organized and established by private individuals, that came to the rescue, and for years they carried the main burden of collecting, preserving, and disseminating materials relating to American history.

"It was the historical societies also who often took the initiative in arranging for public observance of events significant in the development of the country, a practice which the American Jewish Historical Society continues in its program today."

Concerning historical studies, Dr. Heslin stated, "In our concern with the effort to be 'scientific' we sometimes forget that history is a humanistic study and that science is a method, not an independent body of knowledge, thus the two are not incompatible. In reaction against the moralism characteristic of most of the oral and written history prevalent in the eighteenth, and most of the nineteenth, centuries we often tend to avoid the word moralism used, 'lessons', lest we be accused of sentimentality or special pleading.

"I must confess that I fail to understand this viewpoint because these are lessons in the sense of respect and admiration for courage, fortitude, and integrity, to be gained from a contemplation of many historic events, the hazards, as one instance, of the troubled voyage from Brazil in 1654 which ended in New Amsterdam, the occasion we mark today."

Dr. Heslin also pointed out that in New Amsterdam (now New York) already before 1654, at least eighteen different languages were heard on its streets. New Amsterdam was a frontier town in 1654 and many of the problems it faced are similar to those faced by City officials today and the problems of the Colonial Government have a somewhat contemporary ring, such as taxes, rule for standardization for weights and measures, proper patrolling of the town, efforts to beautify it. He concluded his remarks by stating:

"It is well for us this afternoon to reflect that while many historians, and, indeed, properly so, stress the role of geography, climate, economics, and other factors, we are basically dealing with human beings in these areas when we try to recreate the past.

"If it is considered to be unscientific to muse upon the vicissitudes of those who lived before us, so be it. At least it is human to do so, and an emphasis on our common humanity is certainly no insignificant aspect of the knowledge we gain from the study and contemplation of history. It behooves us to emphasize this fact rather than to ignore or gloss over it."

In the Commemorative Oration delivered by the Honorable Jacob K. Javits, United States Senator, of New York, he stated: "The organized Jewish community should now devote a greater part of its budget and efforts to the fight against poverty. A new opportunity has presented itself, the Federal Anti-Poverty Program which seeks to mobilize all community skills in an effort which can result in meas-

CLASS IN COOKERY

one envelope unflavoured gelatin six tablespoons lemon juice two-thirds cup sugar
one and one-half cups drained peaches
one-half cup whipping cream

Combine gelatin, sugar, and lemon juice in a saucepan, and stir over low heat until gelatin dissolves. Remove from heat, and add peeled, sliced, and crushed peaches. Chill until mixture mounds up from spoon. Fold peach mixture into whipped cream and pour into a four-cup mold. Chill until firm, and serve within twenty-four hours.

Mrs. H. Shmukler,
4743 La Peltrie Street, Montreal.

APPLE CAKE

three-quarters cup of oil
two and one quarter cups cake flour
one teaspoon salt
cinnamon to taste
three ~~large~~ apples three-quarters cup of sugar three tablespoons cold water one teaspoon vanilla
three teaspoons baking powder

Set aside one and one-quarter cups of flour, one-quarter cup of sugar, and cinnamon. Mix the rest of the ingredients for seven minutes in an electric mixer. Sift the baking powder with the rest of the flour and stir in with a spoon, by hand, into the batter. Have apples peeled and quartered. Pour half the batter into a greased pan, put all the apples into it, and sprinkle with the remaining sugar and cinnamon. Pour on the rest of the batter and bake one hour, at three hundred and fifty degrees.

Mrs. L. Barkin,
319 Warren Road, Toronto.

CHOCOLATE DRIZZLE COOKIES

one-half cup all-purpose flour one-quarter teaspoon baking soda one-third cup firmly packed brown sugar one egg
one-half cup flaked coconut one-half teaspoon vanilla
one-eighth teaspoon salt
one-quarter cup butter or margarine two tablespoons corn syrup
two squares semi sweet chocolate

Sift flour, soda, and salt. Cream soft butter or margarine, gradually add sugar, creaming until light and fluffy. Add corn syrup, and well beaten egg. Add sifted ingredients. Stir in coconut, and vanilla. Mix well. Drop by half teaspoonful about two inches apart onto greased baking sheets. Bake at three hundred and fifty degrees for ten minutes. Remove from oven and cool for one minute. Remove wafers from pan immediately. If wafers cool too quickly warm in oven for another minute. Have melted chocolate ready in double boiler over hot water. Stir rapidly until melted. Drizzle chocolate in lacy pattern over wafers. Let stand until chocolate is firm. This recipe yields about four dozen cookies.

Mrs. I. Phillips.
4952 Jean Brillant Avenue, Montreal.

22,000 Youngsters In 13 Countries Got Vacations In J.D.C. Supported Camps

More than 22,000 Jewish children from 13 countries were given summer holidays lasting from three weeks to two months in 97 vacation camps operated with financial and technical assistance from the Joint Distribution Committee, of which Charles H. Jordan, is Director-General. For the first time in Spain a Jewish camp was organized on land bought especially for this purpose, with financial help from JDC and the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany. Situated in the hills surrounding Madrid, it started its first season with 75 youngsters from Spain, Portugal, and Morocco.

"France again had the largest number of camps and children, reflecting the growth of the community and the impact of continuing immigration to that country. This year, there were 45 camps serving roughly 12,000 youngsters, double the number in the summer of 1961, before the mass exodus from Algeria had begun," Mr. Jordan said. He stressed that the camp program serves a number of specific needs, especially in the Moslem countries where it allows children a respite from crowded homes in ghettos and slums. It ensures healthy surroundings and a continuation of the regular JDC-sponsored school feeding programs, whose interruption during the long summer holidays would cause grave setbacks in the health of these children.

In all the camps, youngsters get the benefit of supervised play and games. In certain countries, these camps constitute practically the only Jewish contact for the children during the whole year, providing them with a Jewish environment and companionship with other Jewish children, many from isolated communities. Mr. Jordan pointed out that the summer camp is often the only opportunity available for religious instruction and for the observance of Jewish ritual and holidays.

In addition to France and Spain, JDC supported Jewish camp programs in Australia, Austria, Belgium, Greece, Italy, Poland, Sweden, Yugoslavia, Iran, Morocco and Tunisia. JDC receives funds for this and other programs for needy Jews in 30 countries around the world chiefly from the campaigns of the United Jewish Appeal.

LES JUIFS DE MONTREAL

Par Conrad Langlois, en La Patrie

SANS SE CONVERTIR . . . LES JUIFS DU QUEBEC, PEUVENT-ILS S'ASSIMILER?

Les Juifs de Montréal parlent l'anglais et souvent aussi le français, ils envoient leurs enfants aux écoles protestantes, la plupart s'habillent, se logent et, du moins en apparence, vivent comme les autres Canadiens. Seraient-ils donc en voie de s'assimiler? Deviendront-ils des Canadiens anglais comme les autres?

Pour trouver la réponse à cette question, il faut d'abord se demander qu'est-ce qu'un Juif? Que suppose le fait d'être juif? Quelles sont les caractères de la religion juive? Comment les Juifs de Montréal sont-ils organisés en tant que Juifs? Quelles sont leurs institutions? Quelle est leur activité culturelle? Les Juifs deviennent-ils vraiment des anglophones comme les autres? Quelles sont leurs relations avec les Canadiens de langue française?

QU'EST-CE QU'UN JUIF?

Qu'est-ce qu'un Juif? Il est difficile de répondre à cette question avec précision. Il n'y a pas de race spécifiquement juive: il y a des Juifs de race blanche, il y en a de race brune, il y en a de race noire et même de race jaune.

De même, il y a des Juifs de tous pays, de toutes langues et de toutes cultures.

Le meilleur critère semble donc celui de la religion. Est juif celui qui a été élevé dans la religion juive ou dont les parents étaient Juifs, même s'il ne pratique pas, même s'il ne croit pas, s'il n'adhère pas à une autre religion.

Au dernier recensement, il y avait au Canada seulement 173,344 personnes qui se disaient Juives par origine, mais 254,368 ont déclaré être Juifs de religion.

La religion juive s'appuie à la fois sur la Bible, sur le Talmud, sur les commentaires des théologiens juifs et sur la tradition juive. Dans la Bible, ce sont surtout les cinq premiers livres ou Pentateuque (Genèse, Exode, Lévitique, Nombres et Deutéronome) qui comptent: c'est la Thora ou Loi de Moïse. Le Talmud, dont les premiers textes remontent à l'exil de Babylone, comprend deux parties, la Mischna (codification des traditions orales) et le Gemara (commentaires des rabbins).

On peut dire, en simplifiant un peu, que la doctrine juive comprend les commentaires des commentaires sur la Loi de Moïse.

LA RELIGION DES JUIFS

La religion juive est basée sur une croyance: la croyance en un seul Dieu, Jéhovah ou Yaveh, qui a précisément choisi les Juifs comme son peuple élu, et qui leur enverra un jour un Messie pour leur donner la grandeur et la gloire. C'est l'Alliance du vrai Dieu avec le Peuple choisi. Le Dieu d'Israel exige beaucoup, mais qu'est-ce que le Dieu unique ne pourra pas donner au Peuple unique?

Ce qui compte surtout, dans cette religion, c'est ce qu'on pratique. Le judaïsme est avant tout une religion rituelle. Mais les rites, on ne les pratique pas seulement à la synagogue. Ils se retrouvent dans la façon de vivre, de manger, de se vêtir, de se loger et dans les rapports avec les autres Juifs et avec les non-Juifs ou Gentils.

Si les lois imposées aux Juifs étaient si sévères, c'est qu'ils vivaient entourés de païens et qu'il fallait empêcher à tout prix le peuple élu de retomber dans l'idolâtrie. Toutes les ordonnances juives visaient à empêcher par tous les moyens possibles les Juifs de frayer avec les idolâtres et de contribuer de quelque façon aux cultes aux faux dieux.

Si les Juifs orthodoxes mangent seulement de la viande "cachère", ou Kosher, en anglais, c'est-à-dire de la viande pure, rituelle, sacrifiée, c'est que leurs ancêtres devaient éviter de toucher même à toute autre viande, susceptible d'avoir été sacrifiée aux faux dieux. Encore aujourd'hui, les Juifs orthodoxes ne mangent que de la nourriture "cachère". Les seules viandes permises sont celles des animaux qui ont la corne du pied fendue et qui ruminent, mais ils doivent avoir été tués de la façon prescrite par un Juif qualifié pour s'acquitter de cette fonction. Les plus stricts d'entre les Juifs ne boiront même pas une eau gazeuse dont la pureté du point de vue religieux n'aura pas été garantie par les rabbins.

Les lois juives de pureté avaient également pour but de protéger les Juifs contre tout contact avec des gens ou des choses qui auraient pu les éloigner du vrai Dieu.

Si un Gentil entrait dans une maison juive, il fallait l'empêcher de toucher aux mets ou aux boissons qu'il aurait rendus impurs par le fait même. Les ustensiles qui avaient servi à des non-Juifs devaient être purifiés par l'eau ou par le feu ou encore être définitivement mis au rancart.

Un Juif de stricte observance ne peut presque rien faire le jour du Sabbat (qui commence le vendredi soir au coucher du soleil), ni faire une longue marche, ni courir, ni aller en auto ou en tramway, ni se servir du téléphone ou de l'électricité, ni faire du feu. Certains rabbins interdisaient même de manger les oeufs que les poules avaient pondus le jour du Sabbat!

Nombre de Juifs orthodoxes interprète l'interdiction des images comme leur défendant de prendre des photos ou de se laisser photographier. Les hommes doivent garder la tête continuellement couverte (par respect pour le nom de Dieu qui pourrait être prononcé). Et quand ils sortent de la maison ou y entrent, ils touchent le "mezuzah", petite boîte de bois contenant les premières lettres de la Bible en hébreu.

LES CEREMONIES DE PURIFICATION

Encore aujourd'hui, les Juifs conformistes ont recours à des cérémonies de purification, c'est-à-dire à des ablutions rituelles en de nombreuses circonstances, par exemple après tout contact avec des personnes ou des choses impures.

Il y a évidemment des préceptes que même les Juifs les plus stricts ne peuvent raisonnablement observer entièrement, à 100 p. cent, à Montréal, en 1965.

Mais l'ambition de tous les Juifs qui veulent rester Juifs, c'est d'être le plus fidèles possibles aux observances, coutumes et traditions. Il faut s'adapter, il faut pouvoir vivre, mais tout en restant juif.

Tout au cours de leur histoire (depuis plus de 3,000 ans), des Juifs ont préféré mourir martyrs plutôt que d'agir contre les préceptes de leur religion. D'autres Juifs se sont eux-mêmes donné la mort ou se sont volontairement entretués, aux époques de persécution, pour rester fidèles à leur conscience.

MARRIAGES

KIDECKEL-MOSCOE

The marriage of Miss Isobel Moscoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Moscoe, 289 St. Marks Road, to Sheldon Kideckel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kideckel, 535 Sheppard Avenue West, was solemnized at the Clanton Park Synagogue, on September 5, at half-past five o'clock, by Rabbi N. L. Rabinowitz. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a white satin peau de soie gown. It had a scooped neckline; and full-length sleeves; with a high, Empire waistline, accented by beads; and a slim skirt, which finished with a long train. Her tulle, elbow-length veil, was placed by a headdress of leaves; and she carried a bible, with white orchids. Mrs. Paul Moscoe, sister-in-law of the bride, was the matron of honour. She wore a royal blue, chiffon gown, with an Empire waistline, accented by beads; and a slim skirt, with a train; and had a matching, royal blue headband; and carried a bouquet of carnations, sprayed royal blue. Miss Judy Kideckel, sister of the groom, was the maid of honour. She wore a royal blue, chiffon gown; with a bow on the side, accented with a beaded top; and a slim skirt. She had a matching head-band; and carried a bouquet of carnations, sprayed royal blue. Miss Elli Jacobs, Mrs. Raymond Moscoe, Mrs. Raymond Hassman, Miss Marcie Gilbert; and Miss Harriet Kideckel, sister of the groom, were bridesmaids. They wore turquoise-blue, Empire gowns, accented with beads; and slim skirts with trains; and had matching, turquoise-blue head bands; and carried turquoise-blue tinted carnations. Marla Moscoe, niece of the bride, was a flower girl. She wore a long, sky-blue dress, with a long, blue, velvet bow at the Empire waistline; and had a head-piece of blue flowers; and carried a basket of rose petals. Debbie Kideckel, sister of the groom, was the junior flower girl. She wore a matching dress, with a long, pink, velvet bow; and had a head-band of pink; and carried a bouquet of pink and blue-tinted carnations. Morton Mint was the best man. The ushers were: Raymond Moscoe, Howard Moscoe, Paul Moscoe, brothers of the bride; Marvin Allen, Sydney Rein, Howard Cohen; Ted Corn, brother of the groom; J. Koza, and Howard Kutner, cousins of the groom; and Raymond Hassman. David Ballet, cousin of the bride, was page boy. He was dressed in a tuxedo. Blue and white bows marked the aisles of the synagogue. The orchestra of Murray Alter played. Three hundred and fifty guests were received. The wedding flowers were roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. Mrs. Moscoe, mother of the bride, wore a gold-toned, Empire gown, accented with beads; and cap sleeves. She wore a small gold veil, with flowers; and had a wristlet orchid, sprayed with gold. Mrs. S. Kideckel, mother of the groom, wore a beige gown, in A-line style, with a beaded top, and cap sleeves; and she had—a beige veil; and a wristlet orchid, tinted beige. Mrs. Gertie Shumacker, grandmother of the bride, 14 Glenhurst Avenue, wore a short, coffee-coloured dress; and had a coffee-coloured veil, with flowers; and a wristlet of roses. Mr. and Mrs. J. Rodzinsky, grandparents of the groom, 4415 Bathurst Street, were in the wedding procession. Mrs. J. Rodzinsky wore a long, sky-blue gown, with a light-blue veil with flowers; and a wristlet of roses. Mr. and Mrs. Sheldon Kideckel spent their wedding trip in Miami Beach, Florida, and Nassau, Bahamas; the bride going away in a three-piece suit, of Burgundy-red tweed, trimmed with fox, around the sleeves and collar; with a corsage of white orchids. They have taken up residence at 3 Goldfinch Court. Here for the marriage were: Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kideckel and David, of Detroit, Mich.; cousins of the groom; Daniel Moskowitz, of Los Angeles, Calif., uncle of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Billich, cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rosenberg, of Buffalo, New York, cousins of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Caplan, uncle and aunt of the bride, and Paul and Fred, and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ballet, and David and Jody, cousins of the bride, of St. Catharine's Ontario.

THE ABSORPTION OF IMMIGRANTS IN ISRAEL

BY SAMUEL BAHARAV, OF THE JEWISH AGENCY, AMERICAN SECTION

Unlike other countries, the State of Israel is a homeland not only of the Jews resident in Israel but of the whole Jewish people. Under the Law of Return passed by the Knesset in 1950, every Jew enjoys the right of entering the country at will. This fact leaves its imprint also on the economic policy of the State. It follows, therefore, that immigration is an important factor in moulding the economic structure of the State.

Nor can one be oblivious of the nature of the immigrants arriving in the country. For the most part they come without financial means, and a great number of the arrivals lack vocational training or experience in work. Vast sums are therefore required not only for the physical absorption of the immigrants, such as their transportation, their housing, the creation of employment for them, vocational training, etc., but also for their social integration. In this work there is close collaboration between the Jewish Agency and the Government of Israel, for all matters concerning immigrant absorption are supervised by the Co-ordination Board set up jointly by the Jewish Agency and the Government.

The principal gauge of Israel's economy may be said to be the country's rapid rate of development. This development in fact serves as a key for an understanding of the country's economic processes since its establishment. The country's development was, of course, largely due to the constantly increasing waves of immigration. Since the establishment of the State, over 1,200,000 immigrants settled in Israel, of whom a quarter of a million arrived in the last four years alone.

However, in planning and directing development projects, one must constantly have in mind the possibilities of a sudden upsurge in the rate of immigration, occasioned by political or security conditions that cannot be foreseen and over which neither the Israel Government nor the Jewish Agency have control.

The past year, too, was marked by large-scale immigration, as were the preceding three years. The Jewish Agency's Absorption Department was called upon not only to look after the immigrants who arrived in the course of the year, but also to complete the absorption of the immigrants who had arrived some years previously. This work involved tremendous sums of money, and untiring effort, which in the United States is raised by the United Jewish Appeal.

During the past year two distinct trends were noticeable in Israel's immigration and absorption. In the first place, there was a constant flow of immigration from countries of stress. For these Jews, immigration to Israel was the only possible solution. At the same time, there was a considerable rise in the number of immigrants from the so-called affluent countries.

The Jewish Agency's budget for 1965-66 allocates the sum of $29,000,000 for immigration and absorption. When one considers that the absorption department has to care for every new immigrant down to his final social and economic absorption in the country, this figure is very modest.

A focal problem in the process of initial absorption is that of the dispersal of the population. Teams sent out by the Absorption Department begin interviewing the immigrants while en route to Israel, and the localities to which the immigrants are assigned on arrival to the country are fixed in accordance with their personal data and with the policy of dispersing the population, special stress being laid on the development zones.

In the past two years it has been customary for the new immigrants to be transferred directly from ship or plane to their locality of settlement. There they are received by a team of absorption department workers, who take them to their homes which are ready for them, and which contain basic equipment and furniture. They are also given a nominal sum of money for initial outlays. Among the absorption processes, mention should also be made of the medical insurance that is provided free to all immigrants during their first three months in the country. There are upwards of 70 localities in all parts of the country to which new immigrants are directed.

Among the various activities undertaken by the absorption department for the integration of the new immigrants in the country's economic and social life, the Ulpanim have, as in previous years, played an important role. The Jewish Agency's absorption department maintains various types of Ulpanim. Some are boarding establishments, and in the past year no fewer than 2,504 new immigrants passed through these. There are also Ulpanim which offer facilities for whole families. While the two heads of the family engage in intensive study of the language, their children are being looked after by a special staff.

The absorption department also maintains labor Ulpanim in upwards of 50 settlements in which some 4,060 immigrants completed their studies in the past year. These came mainly from South America and from English-speaking countries. It should be mentioned that no fewer than 23,000 immigrants arrived from the so-called countries of affluence in the past four years. Finally, there are evening courses in the various development towns which enable the immigrants to acquire a knowledge of Hebrew after work hours.

Considerable progress was registered during the past year in the housing of immigrants living in the ma'abarot. By the end of 1964, only 1,750 families and 700 individuals remained resident in these camps. Since then drastic steps have been taken to liquidate the remaining ma'abarot, and in the coming year the last remnants of ma'abarot dwellers are expected to move into their permanent homes.

COUNCIL OF JEWISH FEDERATIONS

This expectation, he said, presents a serious challenge to the Jewish community.

"The primary issue in Jewish-Christian relations is self-understanding and communication," Dr. Heschel pointed out.

It is time to stop worrying about Jewish survival and to start thinking about the present, he told delegates from all over North America.

"Let us worry about our way of living here and now. It is not the style of Jewish thinking to explore or undertake surveys about life after death or immortality."

"Our style is to be concerned with life before death. The chief problem of immortality is how not to be dead while the body is still alive."

Samuel Bronfmnn, vice-president of the World Jewish Congress and president of its North American section, said the growing involvement of local, state and federal governments in North America with welfare, health and other services does not take over the work of volunteer agencies.

In the U.S. and Canada, he said, government cannot do this because people don't want it to.

"If voluntary organizations were usurped by government a cold society would be produced where the great tradition of helping one's neighbor would be lost."

"Such a system would make life even more impersonal than it has become, it would erode our belief in private enterprise and would remove from our daily lives the bond of conscience we have in communal effort."

During the banquet two communities received the 1965 William J. Shroder Memorial Awards for superior initiative and achievement by voluntary health and welfare agencies under Jewish auspices.

Boston's Beth Israel Hospital received the award for cities with more than 40,000 Jews, and Milwaukee's Jewish Welfare Fund, Women's Division, won for cities with less than 40,000.

Lewis H. Weinstein, a Boston lawyer active for many years in Jewish welfare, has been elected president of the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds.

The Council is the coordinating body for 220 Jewish welfare organizations in the United States and Canada, which raise approximately $220 million for overseas and domestic needs.

Carlos L. Israels of New York was elected treasurer. Re-elected vice presidents were Dr. Max W. Bay of Los Angeles, Mrs. Joseph Cohen of New Orleans and Joseph L. Gidwitz of Chicago and elected vice-presidents were Max Fischer, of Detroit, Alan V. Lowenstein, of Newark; Edwin Rosenberg, of New York, Cecil Usher, of Montreal; and Judge Nochem S. Minnet, of Philadelphia.

HIRSHORN MANSION AND FABULOUS ART COLLECTION

One of his servants walked in and brought more coffee. "Ah, Louis," Mr. Hirshhorn said, "it's all crazy."

"Why do I collect? I love it. It gives me an inner joy. It's great. I get up in the morning and see these things and it's beautiful. If I like a painting I buy it. It has to do with the heart, the brain, and that's it. I've got to feel it."

He paused and went on. "I rarely buy one piece from one individual. I may like two or three and if I can't make a decision I buy them all. In 1939 I bought forty Milton Averys and left him $12,000 in $100 bills. I saw his paintings and got so excited. I got over 300 paintings by a man named Louis Hilshemius. Why? I love him, that's all."

In the last year Mr. Hirshhorn has purchased works by such artists and sculptors as Abe Ajay, Serge Storrel, Constantine Nivola, Raphael Soyer, and Thomas Eakins. In the last year the total has been 190 paintings and 113 sculptures. "I buy art almost every day," he said.

At dusk, the last visitors had left Round Hill. One woman reflecting the consensus, said the collection was "absolutely exquisite." Mrs. Hirshhorn, however, reported with a grin, says the New York Times, that one woman after looking at some Rodins, Moores, and Giacomettis and Manzus had this to say: "Why did Mr. Hirshhorn clutter up his rose garden with all these statues?"

ter, the Bronx, said that, based upon the group's observations, Soviet Jews urgently needed permission to bake matzoh.

He said every Jewish community in the Soviet Union should be allowed to bake matzoh, the unleavened bread used in the observance of Passover. Only Jews in Moscow now have that right, he said. He also said the Government should set aside new land for Jewish cemeteries in Moscow and Leningrad, where no more burial space is now available.

Rabbi Miller pleaded for the establishment of additional seminaries in the cities of other Soviet republics. The only Jewish seminary now is in Moscow.

Recalling the separation of families in World War II, he called for increased emigration of Soviet Jews who wanted to rejoin their families in other countries, says the New York Times. He said only a "trickle" was permitted now.

The rabbi said that the Soviet authorities were "sensitive to the outpouring of criticisms from the Western world" and that further protests would "elicit more positive responses from the Russian Government in granting its Jewish citizens full religious freedom and equality."

U. S. REFEREE

For many years he was president of the Talking Machine & Radio Men, Inc., an organization of people active in the recording and radio industries.

He was educated in the public schools of New York, and entered a law firm as a clerk. He attended night classes at the New York Law School and passed his bar examination in 1906.

Surviving are three daughters, Miss Babette Kurtz, and Mrs. Hermine Cohen, both of New York; and Mrs. Eve Rackow, of Nanuet, N. Y.; and four grandchildren. His wife, the former Miss Josephine Herzbrun, died 10 years ago.

ARRIVAL OF FIRST JEWS TO SETTLE IN THE U.S., IN 1654, IS COMMEMORATED

urable advances of a permanent nature. This is an opportunity and a challenge which the Jewish community should avail itself of, mobilizing its acknowledged talents and resources in a meaningful way. Jews, who have exhibited a kind of genius in dealing with welfare problems among their own must now turn this talent towards aiding other groups among the disadvantaged.

"Jewish organizations have met in conclave to deal together on a multitude of grave issues. I would suggest that these organizations now confer together to determine the best means by which the Jewish community itself can organize to deploy its resources so that it can, to its maximum ability, discharge its responsibilities in the fight against poverty."
